NEW WATER TORTURE: BIG RATE HIKES

By DAVID SEIFMAN

April 29, 2009

The 14 percent water rate hike on tap this year could be followed by another wallet-crunching 12 percent increase in 2010, officials reported yesterday.

That would represent the fourth double-digit boost since 2007 and would propel the annual water bill for typical one-family homeowners past the $1,000 mark for the first time.

"One could say water rates are really out of control," fumed City Councilman Jimmy Vacca (D-Bronx) at a tense City Hall hearing.

The Water Board seems certain to approve a 14 percent rate increase requested by the Department of Environmental Protection at its next meeting May 15, increasing the average bill from $799 to $911.

Another 12 percent is in the forecast for 2010, a figure not previously disclosed.

That would drive up the average tab to $1,020.
